It is understood that compensation is now paid at the same rate to the native population. It is not clear on what basis this rate of 2as. was fixed in the case of native population. Considering the prices of grains in the market at present and the time of the year when manoeuvres are generally held, the compensation now paid does not seem to be adequate to the troubles caused to the villagers on account of evacuation. To

The Dewan of Mysore.

Dated Bangalore, 7th September 1912.

Sir,

I am directed to invite a reference to this office letter No. 4374, dated the 21st July 1910, regarding the question of the applicability throughout India of the "Rules for the Conduct of Manoeuvres in the Punjab", and to state, for the information of the Durbar, that, on a further consideration of the subject, it has been found that no single set of rules, however elastic, could be ~~desired~~ devised suitable for general application throughout India, It would, however, be -- practicable to compile, on certain defined principles, a set of "Instructions regarding Manoeuvres" for the -- guidance of all officers, Civil and Military, serving in India.

2. I am to forward herewith a draft of such -- instructions and to request that the Resident may be favoured favoured with any remarks which the Durbar may wish to offer thereon.

I have the honour to be,

Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

First Assistant Resident.

Instructions regarding Manoeuvres and Training Camps for the Guidance of Civil and Military Officers.

Note. These instructions are also included in "Selections from the Army Regulations, India, for the use of officers of Civil departments of the Government of India"

Note.- The term "civil" refers equally in the case of Native States, to the Durbar or political officers as the case may be.

The term divisional commander includes independent brigade commander.

I. General principles.

It is realised that the size of India, its varying conditions of climate, seasons and environment combine to render it impracticable to compile a single set of rules to regulate the conduct of manoeuvres which would be suitable for general application throughout the country. It has therefore been found preferable to issue certain general instructions, based on a few main principles, and leave their application in matters of details to the mutual good understanding and common sense of the civil and military officers whose duty it may be to apply them.

The following are the main principles referred to:-

(a) That field training and manoeuvres are a necessity for the efficiency of an army for the duties for which it is maintained, and also that if training is to be thorough- it should take place, as often as possible, on ground new to the troops.

(b) That as the burden or inconvenience caused by the incidence of manoeuvres is one which, for obvious reasons, cannot be equally shared by the community at large it is of the utmost importance that any such burden or inconvenience to the individual should be reduced to a minimum, and that any actual loss or damage, present or prospective, should receive early and adequate compensation.

(c) That it is only by the closest co-operation between military and civil officers that the above conditions are attainable.

II - Selection of training and manoeuvres areas.

1. Divisional commanders will, in co-operation with the local civil civil authorities, prepare manoeuvre maps of their commands, -- marking on them areas where troops can be readily concentrated and economically maintained with a minimum of disturbance, dislocation of business and inconvenience to the local population. For this purpose local gazetteers should be freely consulted and will be found to be of much assistance. These maps should be revised periodically and should show in distinctive colours the areas most suitable for divisional and brigade manoeuvres, training, field firing and artillery practice grounds.

2. At such time as may be found mutually convenient, the -- divisional commander will, in consultation with the civil -- authorities, select the areas for divisional and other manoeuvres, practice camps, etc., during the ensuing training season, the general principle being that as many years as possible should -- elapse between manoeuvres in the same area, the minimum to be -- aimed at being one clear year. It should, however, be understood, that this system of rotation of areas does not apply to ordinary field training, or to minor operations of two or three days' -- duration held in the vicinity of cantonments, when troops are self-supplied, nor to waste areas. Brigade and station commanders should, however, be careful to safeguard the interests of cultivators against any abuse of this principle.

3. The dates for the proposed manoeuvres should be fixed after consultation with the civil authorities who should be provided as soon as possible with a map of the area and general information regarding the proposed disposition of troops and the general -- arrangements of supply during manoeuvres.

III- Field firing and artillery practice camps

In framing a scheme for a field firing exercise the first consideration should be the selection of a tract of country, the temporary occupation of which will cause the least possible inconvenience to the inhabitants; it follows that waste land should, when practicable, be selected and that it will rarely be possible to make a field firing exercise a continuation or finale of manoeuvres. A scheme should then be framed which will fit in with the ground chosen. If these principles be followed it -- should rarely be necessary to require the evacuation of villages.

Should, however, such a course be unavoideble, all arrangements connected with the evacuation will be in the hands of the civil authorities who will, in consultation with the military authorities decide the terms under which the evacuation will take place and the amount or scale of compensation, if any, for disturbance or loss of earnings to be paid to the inhabitants. The question of compensation should also be considered in cases where actual evacuation is held to be unnecessary and where a sufficient margin of safety can be secured by confining inhabitants within certain limits. In all cases it should be clearly understood that mutual agreement, between the civil and military authorities as to the conditions under which the field firing may be held must be reached before the exercise takes place, and sufficiently long beforehand so that arrangements for training may not be upset

IV - Compensation.

1. The machinery for assessment of compensation will vary according to circumstances. As a rule it will be preferable in the case of manoeuvres to employ a staff of compensation commissioners - military and civil - the military side of the staff including, as a rule, Indian officers. When a joint commission not appointed the civil authorities will be the sole arbiters, and their decision must be accepted.

2. The methods of assessing compensation can be best considered under two headings -

(a) Damage to moveable or Immovable property.- Such as walls, trees, houses and live-stock, etc. In this case payment on the spot is preferable. Where a joint commission is employed it will dispose of all claims on the spot, as far as possible, by paying in cash the sum awarded to, and take an acquittance from the claimant. When there is no commission, claims will be referred to the local civil authorites for immediate disposal

(b) Damages to crops.- With regard to what is termed "remediable" damage, such as damage caused by the movement of troops, it will usually be preferable in the case of manoeuvres to arrange for payment of compensation on the spot direct to injured individual. As an alternative, the civil officer may keep a progressive statement of the area damaged, together with a rough estimate of the amount of compensation to be finnaly awarded and keep the ~~garra~~ general or senior military officer informed thereof at periodical intervals; the final award being made if possible when the harvest is gathered, or in the Punjab, where the harvest is late, before the end of March so as to enable the charges to be debited to the training grant for the year. This latter course is one which will usually be the more convenient in the assessment of damage caused by troops training in the vicinity of cantonments.

3. It is of the first importance that the terms under which compensation shall be assessed should be decided before the training season by military and civil authorities in consultation, made known to all concerned and that claims should be kept to the -- lowest figure by judicious selection of ground and avoidance of cultivated areas at a season when the crops are most susceptible of damage. The advice of civil officials on these points should always be obtained, and if it can be arranged that this can take the form of a series of lectures on local conditions and methods of cultivation in the district - the best results may be expected to follow.

4. As regards payment of compensation the principle to be -- observed is that when possible payments should be made on the spot direct to the claimant, and through as few intermediaries as practicable.

5. In the case of manoeuvres the cost of any distinguishing badges for, and any expenditure incurred on, the compensation staff will be defrayed out of the training grant

6 Military officers are forbidden to award certificates to civil officials such as tahsildars, naibtahsildars or Kanungos

V. Transport and Supplies.

For manoeuvres and training of all descriptions Government transport should be utilised as much as possible even to the extent of hiring transport for work within cantonments so as to set free the organised transport units, whose training is equally important as that of the combatant units, to take part in the

In the evening, the rations for the next day would be issued from the 2nd line transport, and the latter should then proceed to replenish from the depot, the locality of which will be notified in operation orders, as though it formed the point at which regiment supplies would be replenished from the supply column. (Field -- Service Regulations, Part II, Section 41-4)

4. In case it should be found possible to organize a supply -- column it would take the place of the depot in the above arrangement, replenishing itself from the depot, or a few railway trucks may serve as a supply column. These depots might also in some -- cases be made to represent certain central points at which supplies purchased or requisitioned from local sources, have been collected (Field Service Regulations, Part II. Section 36-6). their position being similarly notified in operation orders. No previous information as to the location of the depots should be made to the troops generally. In all circumstances the use of the Field Service indent forms should be insisted on.

5. It is also suggested, in order to give the troops practice replenishing regimental supplies of fuel and forage direct, that small depots of these might be located at villages within the -- manoeuv/re/ area; these would represent supplies ~~actually~~ obtainable from the village ~~and would be taken over by units and accounted for to the supply officer of th unit belongs~~. The above is only one amon which will suggest themselves.

6. As regards the collection of suppl in the Regulations regarding suppl India, Volume X, paragraph 2 spirit as well as the letter. required for British troops, including ~~firewood~~, will be made by the Supply and Transport Corps.

It should be realised that luxuries are as out of place at manoeuvres as on service, and that such supplies as milk should be rarely demanded, nor will it be possible for the civil authorities to ~~make~~ any arrangements for the supply of vegetables.

In fixing the prices at which supplies locally procurable are to be paid for "price current" means the price at which the civil officer, having regard to the facilities for supply at the halting place or encamping ground, is prepared to deliver supplies thereat, and does not mean the price ordinarily prevailing in the neighbourhood.

7. When small parties of troops such as patrols are employed during manoeuvres or training on detached duties away from regimental headquarters, they should be supplied with cash and obtain all ~~supplies~~ received and cash paid.

8. It must be clearly understood that no requisitions for supplies may be made except through the civil authorities.

VI- Orders to be issued to the troops.

Special orders on the following subjects will be issued by Army Divisional or Brigade headquarters concerned before the commencement of manoeuvres; similar orders should also be included in the Standing Orders of each station for the guidance of officers conducting field training. If properly carried out by responsible officers, such orders, will tend to keep down needless claims for compensation and remove possible chances of friction between soldiers and villagers:-

(a) Damage and loss of fruit, garden, field or farm produce; young or standing crops, etc.

(b) Cutting or damage to trees, especially from camel grazing

(c) Destruction or damage to hedges, fences, etc.

(d) Officers' servants and camp followers.

(e) ~~Improper restoration~~ of latrines

(f) Restrictions regarding entrace into villages, places of worship, shrines, etc.

(g) Restrictions as to destruction of pea-fowl, monkeys, pigeons, etc., in places where such are held sacred

The Quartermaster-General in India.

(Sd.) A. H. O. SPENCE, Major,

Assistant Secretary to the Government of India.

Instructions regarding Manœuvres and training Camps for the guidance of civil and military officers.

NOTES.—(1) These instructions are also included in "Selections from the Army Regulations, India, for the use of officers of civil departments of the Government of India."

(2) The term "civil" refers equally in the case of native states, to the durbar or political officer as the case may be.

(3) The term divisional commander includes independent brigade commander.

I.—General principles.

It is realised that the size of India, its varying conditions of climate, seasons and environment combine to render it impracticable to compile a single set of rules to regulate the conduct of manœuvres which would be suitable for general application throughout the country. It has therefore been found preferable to issue certain general instructions, based on a few main principles, and leave their application in matters of detail to the mutual good understanding and common sense of the civil, political and military officers whose duty it may be to apply them.

The following are the main principles referred to:—

(a) That field training and manœuvres are a necessity for the efficiency of an army for the duties for which it is maintained, and also that if training is to be thorough—it should take place, as often as possible, on ground new to the troops.

(b) That as the burden or inconvenience caused by the incidence of manœuvres is one which, for obvious reasons, cannot be equally shared by the community at large it is of the utmost importance that any such burden or inconvenience to the individual should be reduced to a minimum, and that any actual loss or damage, present or prospective, should receive early and adequate compensation.

(c) That it is only by the closest co-operation between military and civil officers that the above conditions are attainable.

II.—Selection of training and manœuvre areas.

1. Divisional commanders will, in co-operation with the local civil authorities, prepare manœuvre maps of their commands, marking on them areas where troops can be readily concentrated and economically maintained with a minimum of disturbance, dislocation of business and inconvenience to the local population. For this purpose local gazetteers should be freely consulted and will be found to be of much assistance. These maps should be revised periodically and should show in distinctive colours the areas most suitable for divisional and brigade manœuvres, training field firing and artillery practice grounds.

2. At such time as may be found mutually convenient, the divisional commander will, in consultation with the civil authorities, select the areas for divisional and other manœuvres, practice camps, etc., during the ensuing training season, the general principle being that as many years as possible should elapse between manœuvres in the same area, the minimum to be aimed at being one clear year. It should, however, be understood that this system of rotation of areas does not apply to ordinary field training, or to minor operations of two or three days' duration held in the vicinity of cantonments, when troops are self-supplied, nor to waste areas. Brigade and station commanders should, however, be careful to safeguard the interests of cultivators against any abuse of this principle.

3. The dates for the proposed manœuvres should be fixed after consultation with the civil authorities who should be provided as soon as possible with a map of the area and general information regarding the proposed disposition of troops and the general arrangements of supply during manœuvres.

replenished from the supply column. [Field Service Regulations, Part II, Section 41-4.]

4. In case it should be found possible to organize a supply column it would take the place of the depôt in the above arrangement, replenishing itself from the depôt, or a few railway trucks may serve as a supply column. These depôts might also in some cases be made to represent certain central points at which supplies, purchased or requisitioned from local sources, have been collected [Field Service Regulations, Part II, Section 36-6], their position being similarly notified in operation orders. No previous information as to the location of the depôts should be made to the troops generally. In all circumstances the use of the field service indent forms should be insisted on.

5. It is also suggested, in order to give the troops practice in replenishing regimental supplies of fuel and forage direct, that small depôts of these might be located at villages within the manœuvre area; these would represent supplies obtainable from the village. The above is only one among many arrangements which will suggest themselves.

6. As regards the collection of supplies the rules contained in the regulations regarding supplies, especially Army Regulations, India, Volume X, paragraph 224, should be strictly observed in spirit as well as the letter. For manœuvres, as a rule, all supplies required for British troops, will be provided by the Supply and Transport Corps and Military Farms Department.

It should be realised that luxuries are as out of place at manœuvres as on service, and that such supplies as milk should be rarely demanded, nor will it be possible for the civil authorities to make any arrangements for the supply of vegetables.

In fixing the prices at which supplies locally procurable are to be paid for "price current" means the price at which the civil officer, having regard to the facilities for supply at the halting place or encamping ground, is prepared to deliver supplies thereat, and does not mean the price ordinarily prevailing in the neighbourhood.

7. When small parties of troops such as patrols are employed during manœuvres or training on detached duties away from regimental headquarters, they should be supplied with cash and obtain all supplies on payment, giving and taking receipts for all supplies received and cash paid.

8. It must be clearly understood that no requisitions for supplies may be made except through the civil authorities.

VI.—Oders to be issued to the troops.

Special orders on the following subjects will be issued, after consultation with the head of the civil district concerned, by army divisional or brigade headquarters concerned before the commencement of manœuvres; similar orders should also be included in the standing orders of each station for the guidance of officers conducting field training. If properly carried out by responsible officers, such orders will tend to keep down needless claims for compensation and remove possible chances of friction between soldiers and villagers:—

(a) Damage and loss of fruit, garden, field or farm produce; young or standing crops, etc.

(b) Cutting or damage to trees, especially from camel grazing.

(c) Destruction or damage to hedges, fences, et

(d) Officers' servants and camp followers.

(e) Incomplete obliteration of latrines.

(f) Restrictions regarding entrance into villages, places of worship, shrines, etc.

(g) Restrictions as to destruction of pea-fowl, monkeys, pigeons, etc., in places where such are held sacred.

(h) Duty of commanding officers to report at once any damage caused by troops.

(j) Treatment of hired transport drivers.

lectures on local conditions and methods of cultivation in the district, the best results may be expected to follow.

4. As regards payment of compensation, the principle to be observed is that when possible payments should be made on the spot, direct to the claimant and through as few intermediaries as practicable.

5. In the case of manœuvres the cost of any distinguishing badges for, and any expenditure incurred on, the compensation staff will be defrayed out of the training grant.

6. Military officers are forbidden to award certificates to civil officials such as tahsildars, naib-tahsildars or kanungos.

V.—Transport and Supplies.

1. For manœuvres and training of all descriptions government transport should be utilised as much as possible even to the extent of hiring transport for work within cantonments, so as to set free the organized transport units, whose training is equally important as that of the combatant units, to take part in the manœuvres. When, however, it is necessary to apply to the civil authorities for assistance in the matter of transport the orders laid down in Army Regulations, India, Volume X, paragraph 217, and Appendix VII, ibid, should be strictly observed

2. Similarly the collection and distribution of supplies of British troops and government animals is a matter for the Supply and Transport Corps and Military Farms Department. The case is governed by Army Department letter No. 8299-1* (Q. M. G.-6), dated 3rd October 1912. The nature of the arrangements made will vary with the nature and scope of manœuvres but as far as practicable—subject to considerations of economy and local conditions—the system followed should assimilate as far as possible to war conditions. In this connection it may be observed that the normal system for the issue of rations in war is briefly as follows:—

Attached.

In the evening, rations for the next day's consumption are issued to the men from the regimental transport, which is then replenished from the supply column.

The supply column fills up with supplies purchased or requisitioned locally, or, if these resources are not available, from the lines of communications; as a last alternative they fill up from the parks.

Fodder and fuel to the extent available must sometimes be collected locally by the troops themselves.

The matter of meat rations, either fresh or preserved, and of bread or biscuit, is for special arrangement.

3. The most serious difficulty which presents itself when endeavouring to make the system at manœuvres approximate to that prescribed above is the insufficiency of transport. The greater portion of the transport available is required for the baggage of the troops, and very little can be spared for the carriage of rations. In consequence supplies have to be collected in depôts scattered throughout the area in which operations will take place, and the troops draw their supplies direct from these depôts. The shortage of transport must be accepted as a necessary evil, and in order to familiarize the troops with the system of issuing rations on service, an endeavour should be made to make the system of drawing rations from the depôts resemble the field service system. To do so sufficient transport should be made available for the carriage of at least one day's rations exclusive of firewood and fodder but including tinned meat and biscuit, if available, on 2nd line transport,† the depôt should then represent the supply column. In the evening, the rations for the next day would be issued from the 2nd line transport, and the latter should then proceed to replenish from the depôt, the locality of which will be notified in operation orders, as though it formed the point at which regimental supplies would be

† For infantry. For cavalry on 1st or 2nd line transport.

III.—Field firing and artillery practice camps.

In framing a scheme for a field firing exercise the first consideration should be the selection of a tract of country, the temporary occupation of which will cause the least possible inconvenience to the inhabitants; it follows that waste land should, when practicable, be selected and that it will rarely be possible to make a field firing exercise a continuation or finale of manœuvres. A scheme should then be framed which will fit in with the ground chosen. If these principles be followed it should rarely be necessary to require the evacuation of villages. Should, however, such a course be unavoidable, all arrangements connected with the evacuation will be in the hands of the civil authorities who will, in consultation with the military authorities, decide the terms under which the evacuation will take place and the amount or scale of compensation, if any, for disturbance or loss of earnings to be paid to the inhabitants. The question of compensation should also be considered in cases where actual evacuation is held to be unnecessary and where a sufficient margin of safety can be secured by confining inhabitants within certain limits. In all cases it should be clearly understood that mutual agreement, between the civil and military authorities as to the conditions under which the field firing may be held, must be reached before the exercise takes place, and sufficiently long beforehand so that arrangements for training may not be upset.

IV.—Compensation.

1. The machinery for assessment of compensation will vary according to circumstances. As a rule it will be preferable in the case of manœuvres to employ a staff of compensation officers—military and civil—the military side of the staff including, as a rule, Indian officers. If these compensation officers are unable to agree they must refer the matter for the decision of the civil district officer or corresponding authority. When a joint commission is not appointed, the civil authorities will be the sole arbiters, and their decision must be accepted.

2. The methods of assessing compensation can be best considered under two headings—

(a) Damage to movable or immovable property.—Such as wells, walls, trees, houses and live stock, etc. In this case payment on the spot is preferable. Where a joint commission is employed, it will dispose of all claims on the spot, as far as possible, pay in cash the sum awarded to, and take an acquittance from the claimant. When there is no commission, claims will be referred to the local civil authorities for immediate disposal.

(b) Damages to crops.—With regard to what is considered "remediable" damage, such as damage caused by the movement of troops, it will usually be preferable, in the case of manœuvres, for the joint commission to arrange for payment of compensation on the spot direct to the injured individual. As an alternative, the civil officer should keep a progressive statement of the area damaged together with a rough estimate of the amount of compensation to be finally awarded and keep the general or senior military officer informed thereof at periodical intervals; the final award being made if possible when the harvest is gathered, or in the Punjab where the harvest is late, before the end of March so as to enable the charges to be debited to the training grant for the year. This latter course is one which will usually be the more convenient in the assessment of damage caused by troops training in the vicinity of cantonments.

3. It is of the first importance that the terms under which compensation shall be assessed should be decided before the training season by military and civil authorities in consultation, made known to all concerned and that claims should be kept to the lowest figure by judicious selection of ground and avoidance of cultivated areas at a season when the crops are most susceptible of damage. The advice of civil officials on these points should always be obtained, and if it can be arranged that this can take the form of a series of Every such notice must clearly state the dates on which such firing is to take place and must be accompanied by a sketch or tracing of the 1" map, showing the boundaries of the dangerous area. The Camp Commandant will ascertain from the Deputy Commissioner beforehand the population of every village which may have to be cleared and the amount of compensation payable. He will then send to the Civil Officer, when asking for any villages to be cleared, the amount of compensation payable to the villagers,

The aggrieved parties should prefer their complaints to the Assistant Commissioner within a week from the date of damage, complaints preferred thereafter being liable to be rejected.

The Assistant Commissioner or Civil Officer as he is usually styled should himself verify the complaints and report at once to the Senior Military Officer present any damage complained of.

The Military Authorities should then, if necessary, make local inspection or other enquiry.

Compensation for damage should be settled between the Brigade Major and the Civil Officer, the necessary amount being paid in cash to the latter officer for dis disbursement to the parties concerned.

In the case of regimental manoeuvres the Civil Officer should receive intimation of such manoeuvres at least 4 days in advance and should deal direct with the Unit concerned. If damage is admitted by the Unit, the Civil Officer should make a report to the Brigade Major in view of settling the question of compensation.

In the case of damage to crops, including in that term all reserved trees on both occupied and unoccupied lands as well as State Plantations, the damage will be assessed as soon as practicable and debited against the corps concerned. Sir,

With reference to your letter No. 5061/G.M.167-12-24 dated the 15/20th October 1915, calling for opinion regarding the raising of the rate of compensation payable to villages on the occasion of Military Manoeuvres, I have the honour to state that the Amildats of Bangalore and Devanhalli Taluks report that the rate of compensation for evacuation of villages may be raised to 3 annas per head and the Amildar of Dodballapur Taluk reports that the rate may be raised to six annas.

As the existing rate of 2 annas per head appears to me to be low considering the prices of grains in the market at present and the time of the year when manoeuvres are generally held, I am of opinion that the rate of compensation may be raised from 2 annas to 4 annas per head.

Sir

With reference to correspondence ending with your letter no. 6878 of 21st Sept. 1915 regarding the issue of rules in connection with Military manoeuvres, I am directed to state that the Durbar agree to the modification suggested by the General

Paper under disposal

Staff Officer in the matter of extending the hours of firing.

2. As regards the payment of compensation to the villagers for temporary evacuation of their houses, they are of opinion that, considering the prices of grains in the market & the time of the year when manoeuvres are generally held, the compensation of 2 annas per head ~~paid per head for attached coolies~~ ~~other native population~~ is not adequate & that an increase of rates is necessary and accordingly suggest that the rate may be raised from 2 to 4 annas.

3. The Durbar also consider that the time allowed to the aggrieved parties to prefer complaints viz 48 hours is too short & the original rule granting a week's time may stand.

I have the honour to refer to the correspondence ending with your No. 7446/2., dated 28th September 1917.

The suggestions contained in the correspondence under reference appear reasonable.

There is an exception. 48 hours notice for damage to crops should be ample.

The arrangements for manoeuvres and field firing are genrally that a Military Officer is appointed to follow the troops and hear complaints on the spot. The Civil Authorities are asked to detail influential representatives to accompany the Military Officer.

As far as possible compensation should be paid in cash on the spot by the Military Officer. This procedure has been found very workable and satisfactorv.

The objection to long delays is that:-

(a) Often ~~in long~~ the compensation money does not find its way to the rightful owner.

(b) Villagers are not unknown to have damaged a bad crop themselves in order to obtain compensation.

These points are from many years personal practical experience and are worthy of note.
